

Abstract

The invention relates to the use of superoxide dismutase mimetics and reductase glutathione (preferably Mangafodipir) in order to produce an anticancer drug. Said mimetic, in particular makes it possible to potentiate the actions of antitumoral agents generating active oxygen forms on tumoral cells and to protect non-tumoral cells against said actions.